

Stainless Steel Crown Consent: Tooth# _____

What is a stainless steel crown and its benefits?

A stainless steel crown restores the form and function of a tooth. If a deciduous (baby) tooth has too much dental decay and needs something cohesive to hold the tooth together, then a stainless steel crown should be placed. A stainless steel crown is a very durable restoration. Stainless steel crowns are commonly used on deciduous (baby) teeth, or permanent (adult) teeth that aren't fully erupted and ready for a permanent adult crown.

If the tooth has had a nerve treatment, a stainless steel crown is often placed afterward. Teeth which have had nerve treatment tend to become brittle and are more likely to break if a large filling only is placed. Failure rates for stainless steel crowns are less than 1% per year.

Our goal is to achieve the best clinical outcome by using the least invasive treatment and avoid having the patient spend time and money on a treatment that doesn't last.

Stainless steel crowns are contra-indicated in a patient with a known nickel allergy

What are my alternatives?

Some parents or patients may complain about the appearance of SSCs. Alternatives are:

1. Zirconia crown
2. Porcelain fused to metal

As with any dental procedure you can choose not to proceed with care. Of course, that decision has its own set of benefits and risks. The tooth cavity will get worse causing space loss, and/or require extraction; the remaining teeth may shift and require future orthodontics to reposition the permanent teeth.
